Read the following passage, then answer the question:-

Whit the exception of his father, perhaps no one ever expected the little Thomas Edison to be the man whose inventions were countless. As usual, his genius was taken by his teachers for madness. The child carried out his experiments which most often ended in a fire and a good beating from his father. In the end, he was deprived of pocket money altogether.

One night, his mother was suddenly taken ill. His father being absent, the child called a doctor who examined the lady and said that an immediate surgical operation might save her life.

But the light being dim, he would not be able to operate and prepared to leave. The child grew mad and implored the doctor to wait. He quickly ran to the barber's shop nearby, brokr into it and soon returned carrying a big mirror. Looking at the child in admiration, the doctor performed a successful operation.

While carrying the mirror back Edison dropped it and it fell to pieces. The barber ran after him and beat him severly. By that time, his father had come back and he was told the whole story. Together they went to see the barber who demanded forty dollars for the mirror. "Well, I am sorry. Here ids the money,"said Edison's father. "And here is the blow you gave my son. Now I think it is settled.
